FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

WHAT IS A SELLER'S / BALANCED / BUYER'S MARKET?

A seller's market is when there are more people looking to buy than there are homes available. This causes a rise in price above the long-term average rate of inflation. Typically this is indicated by a sales-to-active listings ratio of 22% or higher.

In contrast, a buyer's market is when there are more homes for sale than there are buyers. As a result, prices typically either decrease or increase at a pace below the average rate of inflation. A buyer's market occurs when the sales-to-active listings ratio dips below 12%.

A balanced market occurs when supply and demand are about the same, with home prices rising in line with long-term average rate of inflation. Typically this is indicated by a sales-to-active listings ratio between 12% and 22%.

WHAT IS HPI?

The MLS® HPI, or Housing Price Index, is a measure of real estate prices that provides a clearer picture of market trends over traditional tools such as mean or median average prices.

The MLS® HPI tracks changes of "middle-of-the-range" or "typical" homes, for a particular area, and excludes the extreme high-end and low-end properties.

The MLS® HPI offers only a benchmark in which to track price trends and consumers should be careful not to misinterpret index figures as actual prices.
